

ALGONAC

Morrow Road: Much has been written in previous years about this famous stretch of gravel in Clay Township. While various versions of the story exist, the basic premise is that a young woman and her newborn froze to death in the woods near the Morrow Road Bridge in the late 1800's

Residents report seeing glowing green orbs in the woods and hearing a crying baby and screaming woman. Others claim to have seen the woman herself as she runs frantically in the woods trying to find her baby. Superstitious teenagers can often be seen parking their cars on the spot where the bridge used to be and then turning off their lights and honking their horn in an effort to bring the woman from hiding.

Several years ago, Unsolved Mysteries featured the story on their show. While findings and confirmation of any haunting are sketchy at best, The Winner's Circle (on Marsh & Shea Rds.) is always serving up .50 pool games and plenty of cold ones. Do not be surprised if you aren't the only one out patrolling this infamous attraction; it's so popular that there is currently a movie in the works!
